No. C 07-3383 PVT

DEFENDANTS' MOTION FOR
 SUMMARY JUDGMENT; and
 DECLARATION OF RUTH E. STEARNS

I. INTRODUCTION

Plaintiff Hao Xu asks this Court to issue a writ of mandamus, compelling Defendants to make a determination on his application for adjustment of status. He also asks the Court to find that Defendants have violated the Administrative Procedure Act ("APA"), and to grant relief under the Declaratory Judgment Act. Plaintiff's claims must fail. Plaintiff's application remains pending because his name check is not yet complete. The facts are undisputed, and Defendants are entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Accordingly, Defendants respectfully ask this Court to grant their

1 motion for summary judgment.¹

2 II. BACKGROUND

3 On July 13, 2004, Plaintiff filed an I-485 application for adjustment of status at the California
 4 Service Center. See Declaration of Ruth Stearns (Stearns Decl.) ¶ 3 (attached as Exh. A).
 5 Plaintiff's adjustment of status application is based on an application for permanent employment
 6 certification for a third preference professional worker position filed by Siebel Systems, Inc.
 7 Stearns Decl. ¶ 4. Plaintiff's application is ready to be adjudicated except for his pending
 8 background and security check. Stearns Decl. ¶ 8. Plaintiff filed the instant Complaint on June 9 27, 2007.

10 III. GENERAL PRINCIPLES APPLICABLE TO THIS MOTION

11 A. LEGAL STANDARD

12 Summary judgment is appropriate when the "pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, 13 and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to 14 any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law." Fed. R. Civ.
 15 P. 56(c). An issue is genuine only if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact finder to find 16 for the non-moving party. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-49 (1986). A fact 17 is material if the fact may affect the outcome of the case. See id. at 248. The Ninth Circuit has 18 declared that "[i]n considering a motion for summary judgment, the court may not weigh the evidence 19 or make credibility determinations, and is required to draw all inferences in a light most favorable to 20 the non-moving party." Freeman v. Arpaio, 125 F.3d 732, 735 (9th Cir. 1997). A principal purpose
 21 of the summary judgment procedure is to identify and dispose of factually unsupported claims. See 22 Celotex Corp. v. Cattrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-24 (1986).

23 B. ADJUSTMENT OF STATUS

24 Section 245 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, codified at 8 U.S.C. § 1255, authorizes 25

26
 27 ¹Defendants acknowledge the Court's recent decision in Chao v. Gonzales, No. 07-1562
 28 PVT, slip op. (N.D. Cal. Oct. 15, 2007) (holding that delay of two years is presumptively unreasonable).

the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security (“Secretary”)² to adjust to permanent residence status certain aliens who have been admitted into the United States. Adjustment of status is committed to the Secretary’s discretion as a matter of law. Section 1255(a) expressly provides:

The status of an alien who was inspected and admitted or paroled into the United States . . . may be adjusted by the [Secretary], in his discretion and under such regulations as he may prescribe, to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence[.]

8 U.S.C. 1255(a) (emphasis added). Significantly, the statute does not set forth any time frame in which a determination must be made on an application to adjust status. In addition, the regulations setting forth the procedures for aliens to apply to adjust status do not set forth a time frame for adjudication, and allow discretion in how to conduct the adjudication. See 8 C.F.R. § 245 et seq.

Before a decision is rendered on an alien’s application to adjust status, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) conducts several forms of security and background checks to ensure that the alien is eligible for the benefit sought and that he is not a risk to national security or public safety. Stearns Decl. ¶ 10. USCIS also conducts investigations into the bona fides of petitions and applications that have been filed, in order to maintain the integrity of the application process and to ensure that there is no fraud in the application process. See 8 U.S.C. § 1105(a) (authorizing “direct and continuous liaison with the Directors of the Federal Bureau of Investigation [(“FBI”)] and the Central Intelligence Agency and with other internal security officers of the Government for the purpose of obtaining and exchanging information for use in enforcing the provisions of this chapter in the interest of the internal and border security of the United States”). These checks currently include extensive checks of various law enforcement databases, including the FBI. Id.

The FBI’s name check process is quite complex. See Eldeeb v. Chertoff, et al., No. 07-cv-236-T, 2007 WL 2209231, at *4 (M.D. Fla. July 30, 2007). Name checks are performed at the request of a variety of organizations, including the federal judiciary, friendly foreign police and ²On March 1, 2003, the Department of Homeland Security and its United States Citizenship and Immigration Services assumed responsibility for the adjustment program. 6 U.S.C. § 271(b). Accordingly, the discretion formerly vested in the Attorney General is now vested in the Secretary of Homeland Security. 6 U.S.C. § 551(d).

1 intelligence agencies, and state and local governments. Id. at *3. When the FBI conducts a name
 2 check, the name is checked against the FBI's Universal Index, in a four-stage process. Id. at *3.
 3 Generally, the FBI employs a first-in, first-served protocol. Id. at *4. However, when an 4 applicant's name check requires a review of numerous FBI records and files, the name check
 5 may require additional time until all responsive records are located and reviewed. Id. USCIS
 6 determines which name checks are to be expedited. See USCIS Clarifies Criteria to Expedite 7 FBI Name Check (attached as Exh. B). An expedited name check proceeds to the front of the 8 queue, in front of others awaiting processing. Eldeeb, 2007 WL 2209231, at *5.

9 The FBI processed more than 3.4 million name checks during fiscal year 2006. Id. at *3.
 10 The FBI is working as expeditiously as possible to reduce the small percentage of immigration 11 name checks for which a backlog exists. This backlog results from the vast number of requests
 12 the FBI receives from USCIS and other customers, as well as the requirement for enhanced 13 security measures existing since September 11, 2001. Id. at *5. A variety of factors play into 14 processing times, including "hits," common names, and expedited name checks. Id. at *4.

15 C. RELIEF AVAILABLE UNDER THE ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT
 16 AND THE MANDAMUS ACT

17 Judicial review under the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 701, et seq., is specifically precluded where 18 "agency action is committed to agency discretion by law." 5 U.S.C. § 701(a)(2). Agency action, 19 as defined under the APA, also includes "a failure to act." 5 U.S.C. § 551(13). Under 5 U.S.C.
 20 § 706(1), a court may compel "agency action unlawfully withheld or unreasonably delayed."
 21 The elements of a claim under § 706(1) are the existence of a discrete, ministerial duty; a delay 22 in carrying out that duty; and a determination that the delay was unlawful or unreasonable in 23 light of prejudice to one of the parties. Norton v. Southern Utah Wilderness Alliance, 542 U.S.
 24 55 (2004); Rockbridge v. Lincoln, 449 F.2d 567, 569-73 (9th Cir. 1971).

24 The APA does not provide an independent jurisdictional basis. Califano v. Sanders, 430
 25 U.S. 99, 107 (1977); Staacke v. U.S. Department of Labor, 841 F.2d 278, 282 (9th Cir. 1988).
 26 Rather, it merely provides the standards for reviewing agency action once jurisdiction is 27 otherwise established. Staacke, 841 F.2d at 282. Similarly, the Declaratory Judgment Act, 28
 28 U.S.C. § 2201 ("DJA"), does not provide an independent basis for jurisdiction; rather, it only expands the range of remedies available in federal courts. Skelly Oil Co. v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 339 U.S. 667, 671-72 (1950).

Mandamus is an extraordinary remedy. See Cheney v. United States District Court for the District of Columbia, 542 U.S. 367, 392 (2004) (Stevens, J., concurring); Allied Chemical Corp. v. Daiflon, Inc., 449 U.S. 33, 34 (1980). The United States Supreme Court has stated that “[t]he common law writ of mandamus is intended to provide a remedy for a plaintiff only if . . . the defendant owes him a clear nondiscretionary duty.” Heckler v. Ringer, 466 U.S. 602, 616 (1984). The Ninth Circuit has explained that

[m]andamus . . . is available to compel a federal official to perform a duty only if: (1) the individual’s claim is clear and certain; (2) the official’s duty is nondiscretionary, ministerial, and so plainly prescribed as to be free from doubt, and (3) no other adequate remedy is available.

Kildare v. Saenz, 325 F.3d 1078, 1084 (9th Cir. 2003). Thus, “‘mandamus does not lie to review the discretionary acts of officials.’” See Nova Stylings Inc. v. Ladd, 695 F.2d 1179, 1180 (9th Cir. 1983), quoting Nelson v. Kleppe, 457 F. Supp. 5, 8 (D. Idaho 1976).

IV. ANALYSIS

A. ALL DEFENDANTS EXCEPT CHERTOFF SHOULD BE DISMISSED

Courts in this District have recognized that since March 1, 2003, the Department of Homeland Security has been the agency responsible for implementing the Immigration and Nationality Act. See 6 U.S.C. §§ 271(b)(5), 557. Accordingly, Defendants Alberto Gonzales and Emilio T. Gonzalez should be dismissed. See Konchitsky v. Chertoff, No. C-07-00294 RMW, 2007 WL 2070325, at *6 (N.D. Cal. July 13, 2007); Dmitriev v. Chertoff, No. C 06-7677 JW, 2007 WL 1319533, at *4 (N.D. Cal. May 4, 2007).

B. RELIEF IS NOT AVAILABLE UNDER THE APA

1. Compelling Action By USCIS Would Necessarily Interfere With the FBI’s Discretion

Numerous courts have recognized the FBI’s discretion “in determining the timing for conducting the many name check requests that it receives and the manner in which to conduct those checks.” Yan v. Mueller, No. H-07-0313, 2007 WL 1521732, at *6 (S.D. Tex. May 24, 2007) ; see also Takkallapalli v. Chertoff, 487 F. Supp. 2d 1094, 1099 (W.D. Mo. 2007) (stating that where delay was due to incomplete name check, “Defendants’ conduct [was] sufficient to avoid judicial intervention.”); Li v. Chertoff, 482 F. Supp. 2d 1172, 1179 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (recognizing that USCIS has wide discretion “in matters pertaining to the pace of the adjudication of I-485 applications.”); Sozanski v. Chertoff, et al., No. 06-CV-0993 N, 2006 WL 4516968, at *1 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 11, 2006) (holding that federal district courts lack jurisdiction to compel the FBI to perform name checks in adjustment of status cases). Compelling USCIS to process Plaintiff’s application in a certain time frame would amount to compelling the FBI to exercise its discretion in a certain manner. Accordingly, Plaintiff essentially seeks to compel a discretionary action, and relief is unavailable under the APA

2. The Delay is Reasonable

Even if the actions at issue were not discretionary, Plaintiff has failed to show that the delay at issue here is unreasonable. To determine whether the delay is egregious, such that relief under the APA is warranted, several circuits have adopted the six-part test first articulated in Telecomm. Research and Action Ctr. v. FCC, 750 F.2d 70, 80 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (“TRAC”).

a. A Rule of Reason Governs the Agency Decisions at Issue

The first TRAC factor requires an agency to govern decisions with a rule of reason. TRAC, 750 F.2d at 80. Given the large volume of petitions and applications requiring adjudication, the extensive background check that is required for national security and public safety, and the limited resources available to it, the FBI is proceeding in an orderly fashion with the completion of name checks in the order in which they are received. See Eldeeb v. Chertoff, No. 07cv236-T-17EAJ, 2007 WL 2209231, at *2 (M.D. Fla. July 30, 2007). Once the FBI name check in this case has been completed, USCIS will promptly adjudicate Plaintiff’s application. Stearns Decl. ¶ 8. Further, USCIS regularly monitors the case to determine whether the name check remains pending. Stearns Decl. ¶ 21. Public safety requires USCIS to make certain that the background checks have been completed and any outstanding issues resolved before it reaches a decision.

In Plaintiff’s case, this means that USCIS must await the results of the FBI name check before reaching a decision on his I-485 application, and the FBI must be given time to perform an accurate and thorough check. Stearns Decl. ¶ 11. Moreover, the FBI’s “first in, first out” processing approach is a method that is “deserving of deference.” Liberty Fund, Inc. v. Chao, 394 F. Supp. 2d 105, 118 (D.D.C. 2005); see also In re Barr Lab. Inc., 930 F.2d 72, 76 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (“The agency is in a unique and authoritative position to view its projects as a whole, estimate the prospects for each, and allocate its resources in the optimal way.”).

b. There Is No Congressionally Mandated Timetable

The second TRAC factor does not apply to the present case because there is neither a statutory requirement that the FBI process the name check nor one requiring USCIS to adjudicate the application within a certain amount of time. Contra Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004, Pub. L. No. 108-458, § 3001(g), 118 Stat. 3638 (2004) (requiring Government personnel security checks to be completed within a certain time frame). Additionally, Congress has not provided any clear guidelines indicating the speed at which the FBI and USCIS should conduct its adjudications. Congress has, however, required that USCIS conduct certain criminal and national security background checks to ensure eligibility for adjustment of status. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1105(b)(1), 1255(a).

Defendants acknowledge that Congress has observed that in most instances, applications for immigration benefits should not take more than 180 days to adjudicate. 8 U.S.C. § 1571. However, the statute expresses a “sense of Congress,” and is not a mandate. Id. The language in § 1571 is merely precatory, and does not impose a deadline on Defendants. See Wright v. City of Roanoke Redevelopment and Housing, 479 U.S. 418, 432 (1987) (statute phrased in precatory terms does not create a substantive right); Orkin v. Taylor, 487 F.3d 734, 739 (9th Cir. 2007) (“‘Sense of Congress’ provisions are precatory provisions, which do not in themselves create individual rights, or, for that matter, any enforceable law.”).

Furthermore, the statute was enacted in 2000, prior to the events of September 11, 2001. See Immigration Services and Infrastructure Improvements Act of 2000, Pub. L. No. 106-313, 114 Stat. 1251 (enacted Oct. 17, 2000). Accordingly, it no longer provides a meaningful standard against which the Court can measure the delay at issue in this case. The events of September 11, 2001 marked a dramatic shift in issues involving national security. Courts have taken note of this change:

It is well known that since September of 2001, the FBI’s resources have been sorely taxed by the demands that have been made on it by the Administration.

1 Legitimate national security concerns, intensified by the sophistication of some 2 of the threats to the lives of people in this country, have forced federal agencies 3 to be considerably more careful and thorough in their investigations than they were in the past. In short, there was a lot more work for the FBI to do and it had to be done a lot more carefully.

4 Razaq v. Poulos, No. C 06-2461 WDB, 2007 WL 61884, at *12 (N.D. Cal. Jan. 8, 2007).

5 Where there are no statutory guidelines, and in order to establish a “rule of reason,” this Court
6 must consider the factors that contribute to the backlogs that both the FBI and USCIS face. See, 7 e.g., INS v. Miranda, 459 U.S. 14, 18 (1982) (“Both the number of the applications received by 8 the INS and the need to investigate their validity may make it difficult for the agency to process
9 an application as promptly as may be desirable”). In making a request for immigration benefits,
10 “aliens only have those statutory rights granted by Congress,” Marincas v. Lewis, 92 F.3d 195, 11 203 (3d Cir. 1996), and no federal statute or regulation prescribes a hard-and-fast deadline for 12 acting upon immigration applications, such as the ones in this case, submitted to the USCIS. See 13 Cordoba v. McElroy, 78 F. Supp. 2d 240, 244 (S.D.N.Y. 2000).

14 As discussed in Eldeeb, the FBI name check is a complex process. Eldeeb, 2007 WL
15 2209231, at *2. It involves a check of a variety of sources, and although most name checks are 16 resolved in a matter of hours, approximately 32 percent require additional, manual review. Id.
17 at *2. Of those remaining checks, 22 percent are returned within two months. Id. The FBI
18 processes name checks chronologically, based on the date the name check is submitted. Id.

19 Before September 11, 2001, the FBI processed approximately 2.5 million name checks per 20 year, checking only the “main” files. Id. at *3. In Fiscal Year 2006, the FBI processed over 3.4
21 million name checks. Id. In addition, the FBI began checking “reference” files. Id. This 22 expansion of the name check procedures prompted USCIS, in December 2002 and January 2003,
23 to resubmit 2.7 million name check requests, for those with pending applications for immigration
24 benefits. Id. at *4. The FBI is currently still working to resolve 440,000 of these resubmitted 25 name checks; because the FBI processes name checks chronologically, the processing of regular 26 name checks has been delayed. Id. Name checks that exceed the two month window require 27 personal attention of the processing agent. Id. at *5. The FBI currently processes approximately 28 340,000 name checks per year by hand. Id. Thus, it is evident that there are substantial factors

1 contributing to the backlog.

2 c. The Impact of the Delay is Minimal in Comparison with the National ____ 3 Interest in Complete and Thorough Background Checks

4 The third TRAC factor is the delay's impact on human health, welfare, and economic harm
5 to Plaintiff. This factor's analysis overlaps with the analysis of the fifth TRAC factor, the nature
6 and extent of the interests prejudiced by the delay. TRAC, 750 F.2d at 80; Liberty Fund, 394 F.
7 Supp. 2d at 118. Plaintiff may be inconvenienced by the delay in adjudication, but this individual
8 interest cannot outweigh Defendants' interests in fully and accurately completing each name
9 check. Security background checks for individuals seeking immigration benefits is a key
10 component to our nation's national security. See The 9/11 Commission Report, 2004 WL 11 1634382 at 352 (July 22, 2004) (finding that, "had the immigration system set a higher bar for 12 determining whether individuals are who or what they claim to be....it could have potentially 13 have excluded, removed, or come into further contact with several hijackers who did not appear 14 to meet the terms for admitting short-term visitors.").

15 In most cases, the adverse impact caused by the delay is not substantial. Applicants for 16 adjustment of status who have pending applications may apply for and obtain employment
17 authorization for the entire time the application is pending. Additionally, most applicants may 18 also apply for and receive advance parole to enable them to travel abroad during the pendency 19 of their application. Stearns Decl. ¶ 26. Even when a more substantial impact is felt by an 20 applicant, this impact, "is unlikely to rise to the level that would significantly change the Court's 21 assessment of the unreasonableness of the delay in light of the importance of the agency's 22 competing priorities." Liberty Fund, 394 F. Supp. 2d at 118. As the highest of priorities, "our 23 national security requires that caution and thoroughness in these matters not be sacrificed for the 24 sake of expediency." Safadi v. Howard, 466 F. Supp. 2d 696, 701 (E.D. Va. 2006). Although 25 a delay in processing may have a negative impact, "nevertheless, in this post-9/11 context,
26 agencies must have the freedom to carefully and thoroughly investigate these applications
27 without judicial interference in their priorities." Patil v. Mueller, et al., No. C 07cv71 JCC, 2007 28 WL 1302752 at *2 (E.D. Va. Apr. 30, 2007) (holding that the Court had no jurisdiction to issue a writ of mandamus due to legal and policy considerations). Thus, when balancing the agencies' interests in defending against threats to national security against the Plaintiff's interest in adjudication, the interests of the nation must prevail.

d. The Effect of Expedition Would Intrude on Agency Discretion and Prejudice Other "First In Line" Applicants

The court in Sze v. INS, No. C 97-0569 SC, 1997 WL 446236, at *8 (N.D. Cal. Jul. 24, 1997), which applied the TRAC test to a similar complained-of delay in the immigration context, found the fourth factor to be the most persuasive. Id. at *8. The court, in refusing to grant relief under the APA, held that "the reasonableness of administrative delays must be judged in light of the resources available to the agency." Id. The court also recognized that by granting relief, it "would, at best, reorder the queue of applications, thereby leading to little net benefit." Id.; see also Liberty Fund, 394 F. Supp. 2d at 117 (deferring to agency's decision on how to handle competing applications for permanent labor certifications).

In Liberty Fund, the court refused to grant mandamus relief where it was requested solely due to the length of the delay in processing alien labor certifications. 394 F. Supp. 2d at 115. Applying the TRAC factors, the court held that without a statutory timetable governing agency action, the TRAC factor, "that weighs most heavily under the circumstances of the case is the fourth factor - the effect of granting relief on the agency's competing priorities." Id. at 116. The court reasoned that the agency's "first in, first out processing" was deserving of deference because any grant of relief to petitioners would result in no net gain - petitioners would move to the front of the queue at the expense of other similarly situated applicants. After examining the agency's priorities, growing workload, and good faith efforts to alleviate the delays, the court concluded that mandamus relief was not warranted. Id. at 119.

Just as in Liberty Fund, Plaintiff's argument of unreasonable delay in this case must also fail. Plaintiff asks this Court to find that USCIS has not adjudicated his I-485 application in a reasonable period of time. Plaintiff's legal arguments under Sections 555(b) and 706(1) of the APA fail because adjudication has not been unreasonably delayed. Contrary to Plaintiff's pleadings, the existence of administrative delays does not mean that such delays are

1 unreasonable. Courts have noted that “the reasonableness of such delays must be judged in light
2 of the resources that Congress has supplied to the agency for the exercise of its functions, as well
3 as the impact of the delays on the applicants’ interests.” Fraga v. Smith, 607 F. Supp. 517, 521
4 (D. Or. 1985) (citing Wright v. Califano, 587 F.2d 345, 353 (7th Cir. 1978)). Indeed, “[t]he 5 passage of time alone is rarely enough to justify a court's intervention in the administrative 6 process.” Fraga, 607 F. Supp. at 521.

7 Similarly, the effect of expediting delayed agency action under the fourth TRAC factor would 8 unquestionably impinge upon agency activities and responsibilities of a higher priority. Such an 9 order would intrude on the agency's discretion and ability to fulfill its highest priority of 10 safeguarding the nation. See Boim v. Quranic Literacy Institute, 291 F.3d 1000, 1027 (7th Cir.
11 2002) (“the government's interest in preventing terrorism is not only important but paramount”); 12 see also Walters v. Reno, 145 F.3d 1032, 1043 (9th Cir. 1998) (“The Government's interests in 13 the administration of its immigration laws and in preventing [immigration related] document 14 fraud are likewise considerable.”)

15 Delays in the processing of FBI name checks arise for a variety of reasons. First, USCIS is 16 not the only agency that engages in the FBI name check program. Notably, the FBI and USCIS
17 processes’ do not occur in vacuums. Any requirement that the FBI or USCIS process Plaintiff’s 18 name check or application within a particular time limit will have the unfortunate side effect of 19 slowing the processing for other applicants who are also awaiting action on their applications for 20 immigration benefits.

21 The requests generally processed out-of-order are cases expedited by USCIS for specific 22 health, welfare, or economic reasons. Absent these compelling reasons, moving some individuals 23 to the front of the queue would simply move that group ahead of others who also had been 24 waiting, resulting in no net gain in processing. See In re Barr Lab., 930 F.2d at 75; Mashpee 25 Wampanoag Tribal Council, Inc. v. Norton, 336 F.3d 1094, 1101 (D.C. Cir. 2003). Furthermore,
26 ordering Plaintiff’s case to the front of the line sets the precedent that the more litigious 27 applicants are most likely to move to the top of the pile at the expense of other applicants that 28 have waited even longer, but may not have the resources to file suit. Manzoor v. Chertoff, 472

1 F. Supp 2d 801, 809 (E.D. Va. 2007); see also Yan, 2007 WL 1521732 at *7 (holding that a grant
 2 of review of petitioner's claims would only, "encourage other applicants to file suit to receive 3 expedited treatment rather than wait their turn in line.").

4 Moreover, the courts have been cautioned against "engrafting their own notions of proper
 5 procedures upon agencies entrusted with substantive functions by Congress." Vermont Yankee 6 Nuclear Power Corp. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 435 U.S. 519, 525 (1978).
 7 Here, where "there are no allegations of bad faith, a dilatory attitude, or a lack of evenhandedness
 8 on the part of the agency, the reasonableness of the delays in terms of the legislatively imposed
 9 'reasonable dispatch' duty must be judged in light of the resources that Congress has supplied, 10 as well as the impact of the delays on the applicants' interests." Wright, 587 F.2d at 353. The 11 complexity of agency investigations, as well as the extent that the individual applicants
 12 contributed to delays, also enter into a court's deliberations. See Saleh v. Ridge, 367 F. Supp.
 13 2d 508, 512 (S.D.N.Y. 2005). An agency's good faith efforts to address delays militate against 14 a finding of unreasonableness. See Wright, 587 F.2d at 345.

15 e. The Agencies are Exercising Every Effort to Address the Delay

16 The sixth and last TRAC factor provides that a court need not find impropriety to hold that 17 an agency action is unreasonably delayed. Conversely, "the good faith of the agency in 18 addressing the delay weighs against mandamus." Liberty Fund, 394 F. Supp. 2d at 120. Here, 19 the delay is due to the pendency of Plaintiff's FBI name check. See Stearns Decl. ¶ 8. As 20 discussed above, the FBI is processing the name checks to the best of its ability, and USCIS is 21 monitoring the case to ensure that once the name check is complete, USCIS can complete 22 adjudication. Thus, balancing the TRAC factors demonstrates the reasonableness of the 23 Government's actions.

24 In addition, Plaintiff has failed to show that USCIS will refuse to adjudicate his application 25 once the FBI completes the requisite name check. See Saleh, 367 F. Supp. 2d at 513; see also 26 Eldeeb, 2007 WL 209231, at *17 (finding that the plaintiff had failed to show that USCIS was 27 refusing to act on his application). On the contrary, the FBI and USCIS are taking active steps
 28 towards completing the background checks for adjudication of his application. Specifically,

1 USCIS is making every effort to complete adjudication as soon as the name check is completed.

2 Stearns Decl. ¶ 8.

3 Many courts have refused to grant relief under the APA, even when naturalization or other
4 immigration applications were pending for significant time periods. See Saleh, 367 F. Supp. 2d
5 at 513 (finding five-year delay not in violation of APA in part in light of volume of applications);
6 Espin v. Gantner, 381 F. Supp. 2d 261, 266 (S.D.N.Y. 2005) (over three-year delay not 7 unreasonable because of government's limited resources and substantial caseload); Alkenani v.
8 Barrows, 356 F. Supp. 2d 652, 656-57 (N.D. Tex. 2005) (no unreasonable delay found in 9 naturalization context because of need to wait for completion of FBI investigation). Just as in 10 these cases, Plaintiff in the present case insists that this Court find an unreasonable delay based 11 solely on the amount of time passed since receipt of his application. However, the law requires 12 a more in-depth analysis for mandamus relief under the APA. A review of the six TRAC factors
13 shows that Defendants have not unreasonably delayed actions pertaining to Plaintiff's adjustment 14 of status application.

15 C. MANDAMUS IS NOT AVAILABLE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM IS NOT 16 CLEAR AND CERTAIN

17 Mandamus is reserved for those situations in which the plaintiff's claim is clear and certain.
18 Kildare, 325 F.3d at 1078. Here, because Plaintiff has failed to establish that action on his 19 application has been unreasonably delayed, he has failed to show that his claim is so clear and 20 certain that mandamus is justified. Furthermore, USCIS has exercised its discretion in 21 determining which name checks should be expedited. Plaintiff's case meets none of these 22 criteria. Accordingly, the Court should decline to issue a writ of mandamus.
